Colorado Lottery Conservation Month Celebrates Open Space and Conservation Efforts Through Volunteer Events All Month

Pueblo, CO -- Gov. Jared Polis has proclaimed October 2022 Colorado Lottery Conservation Month to celebrate the organization's commitment to conservation and protection of Colorado's great outdoors and the spaces where Coloradans play. To help drive awareness about the importance of conserving, protecting and restoring the open spaces of Colorado, the Lottery has partnered with organizations throughout the month to promote conservation volunteer events.

One of the volunteer opportunities taking place in October is the Runyon to the Res Arkansas River cleanup in Pueblo on Oct. 8. The 4th annual event is hosted by the Lottery, along with partners, Colorado Parks and Wildlife, the City of Pueblo Parks and Recreation, and the Nature and Wildlife Discovery Center in Pueblo. Volunteers will help clean up debris from the banks of this important and popular river from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. and will include lunch and special guests. On Oct. 15 and 16, the Lottery is sponsoring a trail construction project organized by Volunteers for Outdoor Colorado at Horsetooth Mountain Open Space in Fort Collins. Managed by the Larimer County Department of Natural Resources, this open space dominates the scenic backdrop in the foothills west of Fort Collins. The Lottery has a long history of support for Horsetooth Mountain, with over $5.8 million in Lottery proceeds going toward land acquisition, habitat restoration, and recreation development in the surrounding area.

Volunteers will spend the weekend camping at Horsetooth Reservoir and working with approximately 80 others to break ground on a new, natural surface trail out of the Soderberg Trailhead. Interested volunteers can learn more and sign up to volunteer here.

"Every October, the Lottery focuses on walking the walk as a conservation organization," said Colorado Lottery director Tom Seaver. "It's important to us to get out and get our hands dirty, bringing manpower to important conservation and restoration events, along with funding."

As of today, the Lottery has returned more than $3.9 billion to parks, recreation, conservation projects and schools; and this fiscal year alone, the Lottery gave more than $180.3 million to its partners.
